We have processed a lot as a society, yet there are still things we need to come together for and change. Even though the younger generations have limited power we can still make a difference and try our best. Some things we can do is volunteer or start fundraisers that donate to charities or help solve global problems, we can sign petitions, and go to protests. Probably the most important way we can help causes we care about is by educating ourselves and others on these topics. If we educate ourselves, we learn the errors the past generations have made and we learn not to make the same mistakes. One of the best ways to educate each other is listening to the people who have been personally affected by these issues, or people who are experts on the topic. Educating yourself can be hard if people spread false information or if you dont know how or what to educate yourself about, but together we can help one another and try to make our society better and fair for everyone.
