- Washington Trends – hospitalizations are rising in Washington state.
- Adams County incidence rate – 6.4% of tests are positive
- Booster “new” Vaccines – CDC has strengthened recommendations and expanded eligibility for COVID-19 booster shots. Pfizer (and soon Moderna) applying for vaccine approval for <5-year-olds. Novavax’s COVID-19 vaccine would be the first authorized in the U.S. with a traditional protein-based platform. One in five parents of children under five want to vaccinate their child for COVID-19 right away when authorized, however, four in ten want to wait and see. COVID home tests remain available.

- Avian Influenza – no human cases in Washington with no individuals being quarantined at this time. Four dead snow geese in Grant County were positive for Avian Influenza. This remains a disease of animals with a significant agricultural impact.
- Monkeypox – first known human infection in 1970 in Zaire, Africa; in 2003 U.S. recorded 81 cases associated with pet rodents (no human-to-human transmission). Largest outbreak to date: Nigeria, Africa in 2017 – 146 suspected, 42 confirmed. The Monkeypox is generally a 2 to 4-week progression and contagious during that time. The spread of Monkeypox is not well understood, however, direct contact with sick people (including objects like clothes, linen, etc.) or contact with dead or live infected animals or products prepared from infected animals (lotions, creams) are known causes. There are currently over 1000 cases globally.
- Tuberculosis – currently there are three individuals with active Tuberculosis in Adams County. One individual has absconded and has not been found. Local healthcare facilities are aware, contact investigation follow ups are ongoing.
- Naloxone – Naloxone is being considered for high schools for possible student opioid overdoses. Emergency Medical Services report opioid responses on the rise. Board consensus was provided for Dr. Brzezny to sign a formal agreement to make Narcan Nasal Spray available for high schools, colleges, universities, and public libraries.
