A Message From VDH Re: Registration Issues

As of late Tuesday afternoon, nearly 28,600 Vermonters age 75 and older have now made appointments for their COVID-19 vaccine. The vast majority of the appointments were made on the first day registration opened, which state leaders called a great win for public health.

The first vaccinations for this age group begin today at Health Department clinics, Kinney Drugs and other locations around the state.

In the meantime, the Health Department continues to work with the Agency of Digital Services to quickly address issues we've heard about from some of people who went online or called to make appointments. For example, the web portal now includes a field to confirm your email – which will help prevent errors when entering an email address to receive registration and appointment information – in addition to other adjustments.

The Health Department thanks people for sharing any problems they encountered, in addition to their patience and understanding throughout the process of scheduling appointments for thousands of Vermonters. We also remind Vermonters there are enough appointments for everyone who is eligible.
