For the filing of PPO Violations:

Even if the Prosecutor's Office doesn't file criminal charges, the petitioner (victim) on a PPO should still file the violation of PPO with the court so the matter can be addressed civilly.

It is the responsibility of the petitioner (not your department) to complete the Motion and Order to Show Cause for Violating a Valid PPO form (available on the www.oakgov.com website), have it notarized, and obtain a copy of the police report from your agency. Then, the petitioner must upload the motion, the police report, and any new additional evidence into the MiFile (efile) system. The petitioner must then monitor their MiFile account to watch for a response from the Judge with a date and time for a hearing and instructions to serve respondent for the hearing. If they have questions, they can call 248-303-1534 and leave a message or email their question to ppo@oakgov.com. A staff member will return the call/email within 24 business hours.
