Proposed heritage sign for new triangle park Ann Arbor Trail at Beck

Title

We need a new title

Indigenous people lived here well before Europeans arrived on the Great Lakes. Their footpaths became many of the roads we use today, including Ridge, Joy and Ann Arbor Trail. Multiple documents reference the importance of two major footpaths intersecting in what would become Plymouth. This geographical area is part of the “1807 Treaty with Ottawa, Etc.” which compensated indigenous people to relocate elsewhere, including to two land tracts along Tonquish Creek - a Rouge River tributary named after a Potawatomi Chief. The tribes that signed this treaty included the Chippewa, Ottawa, Wendat and Potawatomi.

Early European-ancestry peoples came from the east, bringing their rural farming traditions to the area, building farms and homesteads. This heritage is spread around the Township today but in small doses, after the suburbanization that came to the area in the post-World War II era. Nearby Township Park was fashioned from the Allen farm. The Greek Revival farmhouse was moved from the park, saved and stand today as a private residence.

IMAGES: Can we get permission to use one of the historic images that exist online of the Native people in their traditional dress? We have a hi-res file of the Allen Farm from the 1876 Atlas of Wayne County. We need to give credit to the Plymouth Historical Museum.

(On side two, no title is needed as per the Daisy design shown above).

The Township of Plymouth was formed in 1827, encompassing 72 square miles of forest, stream, and field. South Plymouth residents formed their own Township in 1834, naming it Canton. This reduced Plymouth to half its original size. The village of Plymouth was incorporated in 1867 by an act of the Legislature. In 1898, by a vote of 40 to 30, the northern residents of the Township also decided to split off to form their own community. Today this area is known as Northville. Nineteenth century travel difficulties were a key rationale for bringing local government closer to the people it served.

By late 1825, several settlers had cleared portions of the heavily timbered land, raised cabins, erected barns, and planted crops. During the Spring in 1826, residents began to cut roads as more came to the township seeking a homestead. John Tibbits was one of the first settlers, and it was on his property that the first Township meeting convened in 1827. The barn in which everyone met that day still stands on North Territorial Rd.

Image [farms]: Tibbits barn on N. Territorial (need better picture) We could use the one from 1980s in our brochure.

Glacial forces created a rich soil in this area that aided agricultural activity. Farming expanded early on in the 19th century. Cultivation of orchards produced fruit to subsist life. Vestiges of early farms abound, including houses on major roads where families gathered together for local celebrations with their neighbors.

In 1902, Norman and Cornelia Miller purchased 1,100 acres in Plymouth Township near this marker and farmed the land until his passing in 1958. In 1968, the remaining family members sold 40 acres of their farm to the Plymouth-Canton School District with the stipulation that the 10 acres of unfarmed forest located just west of here on Powell Rd. be preserved, for education and recreation.

Today Miller Woods is a nature preserve that shows how the forest looked before the European settlers arrived to farm the land, clear cutting the forest. Many of the trees are over 350 years old. It is an example of “late successional” forest and can be enjoyed year round. The Friends of Miller Woods hold many tours and educational programs throughout the year.

Side Two

First image [1-room schoolhouses]:

(need one closer than Geer). Maybe the museum has a photo of a long demolished school house from Plymouth Township?

Text:

Michigan's early constitutions provided for public instruction in schools for each local district at least three months every year. Children of several generations received their education in one-room structures, such as Geer School west of here. In 1914, the State's Department of Public Instruction specified standards for rural school construction. Several existed at Beck and N. Territorial roads.

image [Plymouth Plank Road]:

Text:

A law to incorporate the Detroit, Plymouth and Ann Arbor turnpike (or timber road company) was enacted on March 22, 1837, "for the purpose of constructing a turnpike or timbered road from the city of Detroit, in the county of Wayne, to the village of Ann Arbor, in the county of Washtenaw." This was "the first plank road in Michigan, and indeed, in the United States."

Third image [Gunsolly mills] (pictures from our brochure?):

Text:

Roads originally were crude but provided better access to mills. A mill used water power from a stream to grind ("mill") grain to produce flour for baking and cooking or corn for meal. Abraham Markham claimed to have erected the first mill in the Township in 1826. Nearby mills include: Phoenix Mill; Wilcox Mill; Luther Lincoln's Lumber mill, Gunsolly; and Meads.

Fourth image [Trillium, Yellow Poopy, Toad Lily]:

Text:

The rolling meadow here is home to many wildflowers, such as clover, violets, daisies, Trillium, the Yellow Poppy (native to Michigan), Blood Root and Trout Lily. Their blossoms provide butterflies, pollinators, and songbirds with the food required for them to live. A meadow is critical to the health of plants in the surrounding area.
