Medication Assisted Treatment

There are several medications that can assist those struggling with addiction. These medications can play an important role in the treatment of a person when combined with therapy.

With Suboxone

Acute Inpatient Detoxification

In severe cases, withdrawal may require inpatient detoxification at a licensed facility lasting anywhere from 3-7 days. Although not everyone who uses opioids meets criteria for inpatient detox, screening might be a consideration. Inpatient detox treatment can result in safe and effective withdrawal, which can reduce cravings, prevent overdose, and prepare the individual to start the necessary stages of aftercare counseling.

Intensive Outpatient (IOP) and Partial Hospital Program (PHP)

For people who need highly structured treatment, who experience a co-occurring psychiatric condition, and/or require a combination of therapy and medication in an intensive, supportive community-based setting, IOP and PHP provide a step-up from traditional outpatient services, or step-down from an inpatient hospital detox or residential setting, and may be an appropriate intermediate treatment option.

Residential Addiction Treatment

When outpatient treatment has been unsuccessful, or when complications interfere with the possibility of treatment being successful for an individual in a community setting, residential treatment may become a consideration.
